Risk Mentor is committed to protecting the privacy of the personal information it collects and receives. This Privacy Policy seeks to explain how Risk Mentor collects, uses, discloses, and otherwise handles personal information. It also seeks to explain how you can ask to access and correct the personal information we hold about you or complain about any suspected privacy breach.

Risk Mentor builds digital engines. Our digital engines transform data into information that supports decision makers, at all levels. Risk Mentor is passionate about assisting clients develop and implement approaches that support good decision making.

We are bound by the Australian Privacy Principles under the Privacy Act 1988 (Cth) ('Act') that came into effect on 12 March 2014. A copy of the Australian Privacy Principles can be accessed from the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner at www.oaic.gov.au.

1. What is personal information?

When used in this privacy policy, the term 'personal information' has the meaning given to it in the Privacy Act 1988. Personal information is any information that can be used to personally identify you. This includes such things as your name, address, telephone number, email address and profession or occupation.

2. The kinds of personal information we collect and hold

When dealing with us, we usually need to know your personal information to provide specific products and services to you. Therefore, it is not practical to remain anonymous or to use a pseudonym. The type of personal information that Risk Mentor collects and holds about you depends on the type of dealings that you have with us. For example:

- If you are a client, we collect information including your name, address, contact phone and mobile number, primary and secondary address (where available), email address and your position title

Risk Mentor does not collect or use a government related identifier of an individual such as a Medicare number or driver's license number as our own identifier of individuals.

3. How we collect and hold personal information

Risk Mentor is required by the Privacy Act to collect personal information only by lawful and fair means. If it is reasonable and practicable, we will collect personal information we require directly from you. We collect personal information in a number of ways, including:

- By email
- Over the telephone
- Through written correspondence, such as letters
- In person, for example, gathering operational processes and business reviews
- Invoice distribution for our services
- Through our website, for example, the Contact Us form
- At workshops, seminars and other functions attended by us, for example, if you provide us with your business card
- At workshops delivered by Risk Mentor as part of our consultancy service provision

4. The purpose for which we collect, hold and use personal information

Risk Mentor needs personal information to perform its core functions. The information is used for business purposes to:

- Provide professional services, solutions, and technical support
- Respond to requests or enquiries regarding our products and services
- Maintain contact with clients and other contacts
- Share information, emerging technology, product releases, and developments
- Engage with service providers, contractors or suppliers relating to our business operations
- Providing on-site consultancy services as requested
- Recruitment
- For any other business-related purposes

If we do not have access to your personal information, we may not be able to provide you with the products and professional services we were engaged to provide.

Disclosure of your personal information to third parties may include other contractors carrying out work on our behalf in fulfilling our professional arrangements with you.

We do not however, disclose personal information to third parties for the purpose of allowing them to send marketing material to you.
